Supposed Ind. Beer Runners Pull Gun On Mokena Deputy

Shortly after the dinner hour Wednesday, Deputy Walter Fisher of Mokena received a mysterious telephone call telling him that a truck load of "beer" was coming thru Mokena that afternoon. The informant gave the truck license number, together with a detailed description of the truck. He said a blue auto would be following the truck.

Deputy Fisher told Deputy John Frisch about the matter, and both waited at the Wm. Helenhouse blacksmith corner for the truck. About 2 o'clock it came up the west road and turned at the Helenhouse corner. The truck driver was followed by a car. When it was found the truck was from Indiana. The blue car was driven by another man, who acted as a guard. One of the men showed an order from an Elks' club in a certain Indiana city for the cargo on the truck. The truck driver grew angry at Deputy Frisch and pulled out a 42-caliber revolver. Deputy Fisher took the gun away from the man. The entire crew was held until Sheriff John Walker of Joliet was notified. He and two deputies arrived about 4 o'clock and took the car, truck and men to Joliet. The cargo is to be analyzed to determine if it is real or near beer.

Fear Bank Bandits When Night Light Fails to Burn

Officials of the Frankfort State Bank had a burglar scare Tuesday evening. Wm. Lankenau, president of the bank, was walking by the bank in the evening, and noticed that the electric light, which is kept burning all night, was out. He thought the bank had been entered.

He notified Fred Warning, one of the bank officers, and they unlocked the bank door and went in. While groping in the darkness for an electric light switch, Mr. Lankenau fell over an ashpan, and was quite badly shaken up and somewhat bruised by the fall.

When the light was finally turned on, it was found that everything was in order and no burglars had been near the place. What caused the light to go out was not discovered.

Two strangers, who had been in town the greater part of the day, had aroused some suspicion, and gave rise to the thought that the bank might have been entered when the night light failed to burn.

May Rent Tinley Park Factory Building

The old wash machine factory, which changed hands last week from the Montana Tractor Co. of Wisconsin, was sold to Dr. C. Scheer and Hans Vick of Tinley Park. Mr. Vick is the local manager of the Beatty Lumber Co. It is understood the property is to be rented. A large brick factory building, five acres of land and a private switch track, connecting up with the Rock Island tracks, comprises the property.

Six tables played. Those winning the prizes were: First, Mrs. Harry Hallihan, a box of fancy Mac candy; booby, Mrs. Fred Uthe, an "all-day sucker." A dainty luncheon of angel food and lemon cake, fruit salad, sandwiches, pickles and coffee was served by Mrs. Wagner. All guests departed wishing the hostess many more happy birthdays.

To Re-let Bremen Road Job

Bremen township is having a difficult time in getting road bids low enough to meet the amount available in the hard road fund for building hard roads. The last bid for constructing one mile on 175th street for $11,200 was rejected as being too high. The entire job is being re-let. Highway Commissioner Bettenhausen has set the date of re-letting for Saturday, April 7th, at the office of the town clerk in the village hall at Tinley Park.

Commissioner Bettenhausen says that if any bids exceed $9,000, and are accepted, the bidder will have to take anticipation warrants drawn on the township's hard road fund in payment of his work. The width of the road is to be reduced from 12 feet to 10 feet.

Commissioner Bettenhausen also wishes it understood that all bids must be put in on time, and that anyone feeling that they can do the work cheaper than the last bid was, should put in their bids.

This bidding is open to any road contractor or builder.

Tinley Park Mayor Predicts Hot Election

Mokena Has False Fire Alarm

Some Mokena citizens, seeing a heavy cloud of smoke in the west end of the village, Tuesday afternoon, thought the residence of Elmer Cooper, local garage man, was on fire, and hurriedly called out the volunteer fire department, who, on their arrival, found that there was no fire. The heavy smoke had been caused by a chimney on a neighboring residence.

Frankfort People Are Enjoying Florida Trip

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 10, 1923

I sent you a postal card today. But thought perhaps you would like to write up a little in your paper. Well, I will give you a little from St. Augustine, Florida.

Mrs. Haass and I went thru the oldest building in the United States, which stands on St. Francis street, at St. Augustine. The house is a curious old world structure, with low ceiling and large fireplace. It is one of the points of interest for the tourist, contains a valuable collection of antiques, and is visited each year by thousands of tourists.

We went thru Fort Marion, a magnificent fort built of coquina, a shell rock of natural formation found only on the east coast of Florida, on the Anastasia island. It took 116 years to build it, built mostly by Indian slaves.

Then still stands the city gate, that was built of the same kind of rock. At that time it was the only way to enter the city, as the city was surrounded by water on three sides, and there they had cannon set up for protection.

We stood on the slave market where slaves were sold. It is right in the heart of the city. They say 1,000 slaves were imported into St. Augustine in one single year of the English administration.

We had a dandy trip. From here we go to New Orleans.

Illinois Is A

Wonderful Mother

Mother's Day, designated by statute as the second Sunday in May, is set apart for observance along the lines suggested by the name.

On that day the people of Illinois will pause to honor, each in his or her own way, the personage who bears the blessed name of mother, whether she be still in the land of the living or has passed to that great beyond from whence no messenger has returned.

All of which brings to mind the pleasing fact that Illinois, as a commonwealth, is one of the greatest mothers in the world. Illinois is mothering more than 4,000 children, in a literal sense and to the fullest extent that the term implies.

There are in the various institutions maintained by the State the number of little children mentioned. The motherly ministrations are performed through the Division of Children, the Soldiers' Orphans' Home at Normal, and in other places where Fate has cast the hapless little ones into the lap of the State. Mother-like, she is guiding their little feet into useful paths and equipping them for the battle of life in a manner that called forth an eloquent commentary by Governor Small in his biennial message to the Legislature early in January.

So when, on May 18, you pay tribute to Mother, Illinois will share the honor 4,000 fold.

Heavy Wind Does Damage

The storm of Sunday night did considerable damage to telephone and electric light lines. Mokena, Frankfort and New Lenox were plunged in darkness suddenly about 10 o'clock Sunday evening. The trouble was repaired by the Public Service company so the lights were on again Monday night. The street lights at Mokena were cut, however, until Tuesday night.

The heavy wind which accompanied the rain and sleet blew limbs off trees. At the George Marti, Sr. farm, north of Mokena, part of a big tree was blown down and windows in a barn were blown in.

A large window in the Geo. J. Hacker real estate office in Mokena was blown in.

There was a very heavy rainfall. The Hickory creek rose rapidly during the night, and by Monday morning was out of its banks at many places, and especially at New Lenox. Sixty acres of the farm run by John Waldvogel, east of Frankfort, were under water.

Telephone lines out of Orland were greatly affected by the storm, and many phones were put out of commission.

Orland School To Get New Maps

The children of Orland Park school are selling tickets on a quilt to be given away. The pupil who sells the most tickets will be rewarded by getting a 5-pound box of candy; second, a 3-pound box. The proceeds will go toward buying maps and shades for the school room.

Mr. John A. Klein, who resides east of town, purchased a large Zenith radio set. This radio is known to be the best, and has a world record. Anyone who is interested can call any time at the R. M. Cooper store and receive a complete demonstration.

Lulu had played it now as she must have played it then.

Half after nine and Di had not returned. But nobody thought of Di. Cornish rose to go.

"What's them?" Mrs. Bett demanded.

"Dwight's letters, mamma. You mustn't touch them!" Lulu's voice was sharp.

"Say, Cornish, at the door, dropped his voice. "If there was anything I could do at any time, you'd let me know, wouldn't you?"

That past tense, those subjunctives, unconsciously called upon her to feel no intrusion.

"Oh, thank you," she said. "You don't know how good it is to feel—"

"Of course it is," said Cornish heartily.

They stood for a moment on the porch. The night was one of low clamor from the grass, tiny voices, insisting.

"Of course," said Lulu, "of course you won't—you wouldn't—"

"Say anything?" he divined. "Not for dollars. Not," he repeated, "for dollars."

"But I knew you wouldn't," she told him.

He took her hand. "Good-night," he said. "I've had an awful nice time stinging and listening to you talk—well, of course—I mean," he cried, "the supper was just fine. And so was the music."

"Oh, no," she said.

Mrs. Bett came into the hall.

"Lulu," she said, "I guess you didn't notice—this one's from Ninian."

"Mother—"

"I opened it—why, of course I did. It's from Ninian."

Mrs. Bett held out the opened envelope, the unfolded letter, and a yellowed newspaper clipping.

"See," said the old woman, "says, 'Corrie Waters, music hall singer—married last night to Ninian Deacon.' Say, Lulu, that must be her."

Lulu threw out her hands.

"There!" she cried triumphantly. "He was married to her, just like he said!"

The Plows were at breakfast next morning when Lulu came in casually at the side door. Yes, she said, she had had breakfast. She merely wanted to see them about something. Then she said nothing, but sat looking with a troubled frown at Jenny. Jenny's hair was about her neck, like the hair of a little girl, a south window poured light upon her, the fruit and honey upon the table seemed her only possible food.

"You look troubled, Lulu," Mrs. Plow said. "Is it about getting work?"

"No," said Lulu, "no. I've been places. I guess the bakery is going to let me make cake."

"I knew it would come to you," Mrs. Plow said, and Lulu thought that this was a strange way to speak, when she herself had gone after the cakes. But she kept on looking about the room. It was so bright and quiet. As she came in, Mr. Plow had been reading from a book at table.

"I wish—" said Lulu, as she looked at them. But she did not know what she wished. Certainly it was for no moral excellence, for she perceived none.

"What is it, Lulu?" Mr. Plow asked, and he was bright and quiet too, Lulu thought.

"Well," said Lulu, "it's not much, but I wanted Jenny to tell me about last night."

"Last night?"

"Yes. Would you—" Hesitation was her only way of apology. "Where did you go?" She turned to Jenny.

Jenny looked up in her clear and ardent fashion: "We went across the river and carried supper and then we came home."

"What time did you get home?"

"Oh, it was still light. Long before eight, it was."

Lulu hesitated and flushed, asked how long Di and Bobby had stayed there at Jenny's; whereupon she heard that Di had to be home early on account of Mr. Cornish, so that she and Bobby had not stayed at all. To which Lulu said an "of course," but first she stared at Jenny and so impaired the strength of her assent. Almost at once she rose to go.

"Nothing else?" said Mrs. Plow, catching that look of hers.

Lulu wanted to say: "My husband was married before, just as he said he was." But she said nothing more, and went home. There she put it to Di and, with her terrible bluntness, reviewed to Di the testimony.

"You were not with Jenny after eight o'clock. Where were you?" Lulu spoke formally and her rehearsals were evident.

Di said: "When mamma comes home, I'll tell her."

"Down the walk. Down the side walk."

"She must have gone to Jenny's," said Lulu. "I wish she wouldn't do that without telling me."

Monona laughed out and shook her straight hair. "She'll catch it!" she cried in sisterly enjoyment.

It was when Lulu had come back from the kitchen and was seated at the table that Mrs. Bett observed:

"I didn't think Inie'd want her to take her nice new satchel."

"Her satchel?"

"Yes. Inie wouldn't take it north herself, but Di had it."

"Mother," said Lulu, "when Di went away just now, was she carrying a satchel?"

"Didn't I just tell you?" Mrs. Bett demanded, aggrieved. "I said I didn't think Inie—"

"Mother, which way did she go?"

Monona pointed with her spoon. "She went that way," she said. "I see her."

Lulu looked at the clock. For Monona had pointed toward the railway station. The twelve-thirty train, which every one took to the city for shopping, would be just about leaving.

"Monona," said Lulu, "don't you go out of the yard while I'm gone. Mother, you keep her—"

Lulu ran from the house and up the street. She was in her blue cotton dress, her old shoes; she was hatless and without money. When she was still two or three blocks from the station, she heard the twelve-thirty "pulling out."

She ran badly, her ankles in their low, loose shoes continually turning, her arms held taut at her sides. So she came down the platform, and to the ticket window. The contained ticket man, wanted to lost trains and perturbed faces, yet actually ceased counting when he saw her:

"Lenny! Did Di Deacon take that train?"

"Sure she did," said Lenny.

"And Bobby Larkin?" Lulu cared nothing for appearances now.

"He went in on the Local," said Lenny, and his eyes widened.

"Where?"

"See," Lenny thought it through, "Millton," he said. "Yes, sure. Millton. Both of 'em."

"How long till another train?"

"Well, sir," said the ticket man, "you're in luck, if you was goin' too. Seventeen was late this morning—she'll be along, jerk of a lamb's tail."

"Then," said Lulu, "you got to give me a ticket to Millton, without me paying till after—and you got to lend me two dollars."

"Sure thing," said Lenny, with a manner of laying the entire railway system at her feet.

"Seventeen" would rather not have stopped at Warbleton, but Lenny's signal was law on the time card, and the magnificent yellow express slowed down for Lulu. Hatless, and in her blue cotton gown, she climbed aboard.

Then her old inefficiency seized upon her. What was she going to do? Millton! She had been there but once, years ago—how could she ever find anybody? Why had she not stayed in Warbleton and asked the sheriff or somebody—no, not the sheriff. Cornish, perhaps. Oh, and Dwight and Ina were going to be angry now! And Di—little Di. As Lulu thought of her she began to cry. She said to herself that she had taught Di to sew.

In sight of Millton, Lulu was seized with trembling and physical nausea. She had never been alone in any unfamiliar town. She put her hands to her hair and for the first time realized her rolled-up sleeves. She was pulling down these sleeves when the conductor came through the train.

"Could you tell me," she said timidly, "the name of the principal hotel in Millton?"

Ninian had asked this as they neared Savannah, Georgia.

The conductor looked curiously at her.

"Why, the Hess house," he said.

"Wasn't you expecting anybody to meet you?" he asked, kindly.

"No," said Lulu, "but I'm going to find my folks—" Her voice trailed away.

"Beats all," thought the conductor, using his utility formula for the universe.

In Millton Lulu's inquiry for the Hess house produced no consternation. Nobody paid any attention to her. She was almost taken to be a new servant there.

"You stop feeling so," she said to herself angrily at the lobby entrance.

"Ain't you been to that big hotel in Savannah, Georgia?"

The Hess house, Millton, had a tradition of its own to maintain, it seemed, and they sent her to the rear basement door. She obeyed meekly, but she lost a good deal of time before she found herself at the end of the office desk. It was still longer before anyone attended her.

"Please, sir!" she burst out. "See if Di Deacon has put her name on your book."

Her appeal was tremendous, compelling. The young clerk listened to her, showed her where to look in the register. When only strange games and strange writing presented themselves there, he said:

"Tried the parlor?"

And directed her kindly and with his thumb, and in the other hand a pen divorced from his ear for the express purpose.

Briton Says Japan Fooled Conference

WASHINGTON.—Something of a furor has been stirred up in naval, political and diplomatic circles here by the publication in the Atlantic Monthly of an article written by Hector Bywater, celebrated British naval authority, calling the Washington armament conference a "patent failure" in its main purpose and describing in rather frank manner how the Japanese outwitted the American delegates.

Senator Robinson (Dem., Ark.) laid the article before the senate and had it published in the Congressional Record.

"The initial fact that emerges from a survey of the situation today," Mr. Bywater wrote, "is the patent failure of the conference to achieve its main purpose, namely, to check the further expansion of sea armaments in any and every shape or form. The result is that today, barely twelve months after the acceptance of the limitation treaty, a revival of ship building competition seems inevitable if the balance of power as regulated by that treaty is to be maintained. To state the case in a sentence: Japan, by diverting to the construction of cruisers and submarines no small part of the energy she formerly expended on capital ships, will soon be in possession of a fleet of auxiliary combatant vessels superior in some respects to that of any other power."

Mr. Bywater says that as soon as Japan learned that the Washington government was contemplating a naval armament conference it set to work feverishly to complete the fortification of the Bonin islands under the strictest secrecy. By December, 1921, the work was finished.

"Meanwhile," says Mr. Bywater, "the Washington conference had assembled and Admiral Baron Kato of the Japanese delegation had taken the first opportunity to inform his American colleagues that Japan regarded the abandonment of the Philippine and Guam fortifications as the condition precedent to negotiations for the reduction of her shipbuilding program."

Development of Water Transportation

THERE are numerous indications that a tremendous development of water transportation in this country is at hand. High freight rates and the inability of the railroads to finance extensions and the additional equipment required by increased agricultural and industrial production are accelerating the development of other means of transportation, notably motortrucks and vessels.

Reviving prosperity indicates that the day is not far distant when every carrier resource of the country will be taxed to the limit. The demand for adequate and cheap transportation then will be so great, it is calculated, as to carry the St. Lawrence seaway and the lakes to the gulf waterway projects to swift consummation, making the Great Lakes system the greatest waterway in the world in volume of commerce.

Already Washington is being bombarded by the shipping interests with appeals to remove alleged rate discriminations that have grown up in favor of all rail transportation and against water or rail and water carriage. Such discriminations, it is asserted, are hampering the development of waterways to meet transportation needs.

Julius Barnes, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, has called a conference of transportation and shipping interests to study the rate structure and other problems with a view to removing obstacles to the expansion of transit facilities.

One of the most comprehensive presentations of the complaint of rate discrimination against Great Lakes traffic has been made to the Federal coal commission by H. B. Smith, president of the Northwestern Coal Dock Operators' association, and Fred G. Hartwell of Chicago. They told the commission that except in the case of strikes, shortages and high prices of coal are due exclusively to lack of transportation.

Progress of the Birth Control Bill Seen

MEMBERS of the judiciary committees of the senate and house were deluged with letters from all parts of the country urging favorable action on Cummins-Kissel bill proposed by the Voluntary Parenthood league for the purpose of removing from the old Anthony Comstock law of 1873 the prohibition against circulation of contraceptive information. The pending bill is known as the birth control bill.

Contrary to general expectations, organized opposition has not developed, according to its sponsors, who say the appeal for its adoption is growing steadily. Senator Cummins (Rep., Ia.) and Representative Kissel (Rep., N. Y.), who introduced the bills, have received only one adverse letter each up to the present.

The protest to Senator Cummins came from John Sumner, successor to Anthony Comstock as head of the New York Society for Suppression of Vice. Comstock initiated the old statute which the Cummins-Kissel bill would amend by taking out the words that prohibit circulation of scientific knowledge as to the control of conception.

Although the birth control advocates finally have succeeded in getting the bill before congress, there is a demonstration of official timidity there in dealing with this vexatious social issue in which multitudes of people are deeply interested. Members of both houses realize that the practice of birth control has been growing in this country, particularly among what are called the "upper classes." They know that books, magazine articles and studies have appeared in the last few years dealing with this subject.

There is a Washington office in charge of energetic and zealous advocates. There is a campaign paper, called the Birth Control Herald, which is described as the official organ of the league.

Why Congress and Country Get a Rest

IT IS an open secret that when President Harding decided not to call an extra session of congress official Washington breathed a sigh of relief.

To be sure, when he came to his decision, everything pointed to the failure of the pending ship subsidy bill, through the inability of its sponsors to bring it to a vote in the senate. The President, however, concluded that it would be a waste of time to have the bill taken up again by the new congress in an extra session.

There were other reasons for the President's decision. He thought the country needed a long rest from congressional agitation. The rest is especially desired by business interests which have been uneasy over certain tendencies of a considerable portion of the membership of the senate and house regarded by the business interests as radical.

Of special interest in this connection is the President's decision to take no further steps toward an investigation of the railroad situation during the congressional recess.

As proposed originally by the Association of Owners of Railroad Securities, the plan was to direct that all railway freight cars should be pooled under the control of a federal commission which should have authority to allocate them as conditions warranted according to localities, seasonal activities and other considerations.

To recognize all the elements which his conferees desired to have included in the commission's personnel would mean the appointment of a body of about 50 persons. After consideration of all the suggestions made the President came to the conclusion that the plan was not feasible and he therefore abandoned the whole scheme.

I tried the best physicians I could hear of, and also several put-up medicines, but nothing did me any good. I got so bad I could not work very steadily, when a friend came to see me and insisted upon my trying Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. That Fetched Her.

The Boston girl was very pretty, but evidently not much in favor of being petted by comparative strangers. The young man was making fair progress, however. It was evident that she liked him. Finally he asked for a kiss. She considered this judicially.

"And why should I give you a kiss?" she demanded.

"I presume I can furnish no adequate reasons," he replied. "Your motives must be altruistic."

That landed her.

The Three Crosses

By REV. C. H. BENSON
Teacher of Child Study and Pedagogy, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—And when they were come to the place which is called Calvary, there they crucified Him, and the malefactors, one on the right hand and the other on the left.—Luke 23:33.

The three crosses were a fulfillment of prophecy. Seven centuries before, Isaiah perceived Calvary's tragedy for he predicted that "He would be numbered with the transgressors and be with the wicked in his death."

Well might these crosses be an occasion of prophecy. Hanging between heaven and earth were the three representatives of the human race. One died for sin. One died in sin. One died saved from sin.

Consider the middle cross where hung the One who died for sin. This is the theme for many sermons and the very sum and substance of the gospel. As they were nailing His hands and feet there was heard the first utterance from His lips. The malefactors blasphemed but Christ prayed. Did He pray for Himself? Was it a repetition of the agony in the garden? No. He had conquered all that. His prayer was for His murderers: "Father forgive them for they know not what they do."

It was the prayer that was to start one of the malefactors to thinking. It was the prayer that was to convert the Roman centurion. It was the prayer that at Pentecost was to save thousands of His enemies. But then, alas! that prayer seemed to fall upon indifferent ears—"They know not what they do." Ah, no, "for had they known it they would not have crucified the Lord of glory." They knew many truths but they did not know "the way, the truth and the life." They knew prophecy but they did not recognize the fulfillment of prophecy. He died for sin since "there is none of us that can by any means redeem his brother nor give to God a ransom for him."

Consider the second cross where hung the one who died in sin. The two malefactors alike jeered Him. "They that were crucified with Him reviled Him." But there was one of the thieves upon whom Christ's intercessory prayer had no effect. More tremendous than his physical pain was his scorn and hatred of Him who occupied the middle cross. He joined in the mockery of the crowds: "If thou be the Christ, save thyself and us!" He hated Christ because His power was not used to save him from his present pain and punishment.

But why should this malefactor have been saved? He had committed crime. He made no confession of guilt. He sought no pardon. All he was concerned about was his personal safety. If Christ had delivered him he would not have believed on Him. Had he been liberated he would not have changed his criminal nature or saved society from his future crimes. His approaching death did not startle him. The Savior's prayer did not soften him. His companion's repentance did not stir him. He died scoffing when he might have died singing.

Consider the third cross upon which hung the man saved from sin. He was arrested in his mockery by the patient, pathetic prayer of the Savior. He could no longer jeer. The blasphemy of his companion now grated upon his ears. He rebuked him by telling him that it was no time for such business. Death was before them. Judgment was at hand.

Next this penitent thief did what all sinners must do. He confessed his sin: "We indeed justly receive the due reward of our deeds." Then he took the next step. He admitted that Christ was suffering an innocent death: "This man hath done nothing amiss." It was a bold thing for him to make this confession of faith. The court had condemned Christ. The church had reviled Him. The mob was against Him. Yet this malefactor undertook to reverse the decision of the Roman government, the Jewish sanhedrin and popular opinion and pronounce the Son of God unworthy of death.

He did not stop there. He now addressed his Savior: "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." He acknowledged Him as King, for he spoke of His Kingdom. Such in mockery had been the inscription on the cross. But here was a man braver than the Jews, braver than the Romans, braver than the disciples, who in his dying breath saluted Christ as King. The dying thief had faith enough to recognize Christ as the rejected king of the Jews. No wonder our Lord turned to him and said: "Today thou shalt be with Me in paradise."

Three crosses bearing the three dying representatives of the human race. One died in love that none might perish. One died in anguish that none might presume. One died in faith that none might despair.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, will at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says, "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by parcel post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

DESERVING OF HIGH HONORS

Doctor Wagner of the Darmstadt (Germany) Experiment Station Has Done Much for Agriculture.

Fifty years ago Dr. Paul Wagner became director of the experiment station at Darmstadt, which had just been founded, and has since won for this institution a world renown, through his investigations on plant foods. Doctor Wagner certainly deserves to receive great commendation for having, with the help of his own method of pot experiments, substantially extended, and firmly established the foundation for the use of commercial fertilizers.

He was the first to recognize and correctly estimate the fertilizing effect of the Thomas phosphate or basic fertilizer.

By a steady improvement in the methods of fertilizing experiments in the field, he succeeded in making of these field experiments a practical means of exact investigation.

Doctor Wagner, furthermore, has clearly shown the results of his investigations in the vegetation house, field and laboratory, to the practical farmer, either in articles which are easily understood, or in inspiring lectures; and in this way he has contributed in an enormous degree toward the proper use of commercial fertilizers in agriculture.

Here in the United States many of Doctor Wagner's articles are known, having been translated or summarized by numerous writers, to the great advantage of American agriculture.

WAS THE FIRST AERIALIST

Flying Squirrel May Be Said to Have Been Forerunner of Parachute and Machines.

No, we are not referring to birds, we mean that shy creature, the flying squirrel. He was the first aerialist and was the forerunner of the parachute and the flying machine, asserts a writer in Our Dumb Animals. It is probable that he taught early experimenters as much about flying as did birds. Do you know any other four-footed animal that flies? This squirrel is by nature a fly-by-night, as he does most of his flying after dark, although he will fly in the daytime if occasion arises. Woodsmen sawing down trees have seen them appear from a hole in a dead limb and fly out to safety before the tree fell. This little animal uses his tail as a rudder to guide him in his flight. He is able to fly because of membranes connecting feet and legs on either side. Some flying squirrels are reddish colored, while others are gray. They are said to make good pets.

By a steady improvement in the methods of fertilizing experiments in the field, he succeeded in making of these field experiments a practical means of exact investigation.

Doctor Wagner, furthermore, has clearly shown the results of his investigations in the vegetation house, field and laboratory, to the practical farmer, either in articles which are easily understood, or in inspiring lectures; and in this way he has contributed in an enormous degree toward the proper use of commercial fertilizers in agriculture.

HOW TURTLES FIND THE SEA

Explanation, According to Harvard Scientist, Is Their Tendency to Travel Down Hill.

Why loggerhead turtles readily find their way to the sea soon after hatching, has been discovered by George H. Parker of the zoological department of Harvard university. These reptiles are hatched inland, and soon after birth crawl out of their nests, he explains. Then with a few exceptions they immediately start their journey in the exact direction of the sea.

The most important reason for this behavior of the turtle is their tendency to go down hill, Mr. Parker believes. They also show an inclination to move toward regions in which the horizon is clear and unobstructed by large masses. And blue areas seem to attract them more than other colors. Their actions should be regarded more complex than a simple response to light, for the retina of their eyes respond to the details, such as blue color, rather than to the image as a whole.

By a steady improvement in the methods of fertilizing experiments in the field, he succeeded in making of these field experiments a practical means of exact investigation.

Dope Traffic Grips Whole Nation; Addicts Increasing in Every Town

Narcotic Squad inspecting $2,000 worth of dope seized in Los Angeles raid.

FOLLOWING closely on the news of the death of Wallace Reid, moribund's popular young idol a victim of the narcotic habit, staggering revelations of a nation-wide and uncontrolled dope traffic are made by Sidney Howard in the first of a series of outstanding articles in Hearst's International Magazine for February.

It is announced that copies of the entire series will be placed in the hands of every member of Congress, and action sought in high places against what Mr. Howard calls the most insidious evil on earth as it exists in America today.

The first article quotes Dr. Alexander Lambert, one of New York's most eminent medical consultants, as saying that ten times more opium is imported into America yearly than all the physicians in the nation use in practice. The tentacles of the drug octopus, it is stated, extend into every town and hamlet of the nation. One little town of 5,000 inhabitants is named as using more narcotics daily than all the great hospitals of New York.

I had lost energy and strength until when my day's work was over I would feel completely played out."

"I now eat anything I want, always have a fine appetite, and have gained eight pounds. I am certainly thankful to be able to enjoy a good meal once more and not suffer afterwards. I am just like a new man and Tanlac gets all the credit."

LESSON FOR MARCH 18

JESUS CRUCIFIED

LESSON TEXT—Luke 23:33-35.
GOLDEN TEXT—He was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon Him, and with His stripes we are healed.—Isaiah 53:5.
REFERENCE MATERIAL—Psa. 22:1-21; I Cor. 1:23, 24; Gal. 6:14.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus on the Cross.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus on the Cross.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Our Salvation Costs.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Meaning of Christ's Death.

We now face the greatest tragedy of all time. No record in the annals of history approaches it. It is the very climax of all history. Though unique in its blackness, from it flows streams of liberty and life for all the world. Let every teacher have the personal experience of Christ's death for him, and then get his pupils to see that Christ's death was instead of their own death.

I. The Place of Crucifixion (v. 33). They led Him away to Calvary, a hill north of Jerusalem resembling a skull. Calvary is the Latin word and Golgotha is the Hebrew. This is a significant name for the place where man's redemption was accomplished. The skull is an apt picture of man's condition as the result of sin—life and intelligence are gone, leaving only the dark empty cavern which once contained them. Jesus was not crucified in the city for He was to suffer without the gate (Heb. 13:12).

II. His Companions on the Cross (v. 33).

Two malefactors were crucified with Him. Their names are not given. This is a fulfillment of the Scriptures. "He was numbered with the transgressors." (Isaiah 53:12).

III. His Forgiving Love (v. 34).

He cried, "Father, forgive them." He doubtless had in mind not only the soldiers who acted for the government, but the Jews who in their blindness were ignorant of the enormity of their crime. He had no hatred in His heart. He yearned for their salvation.

IV. The World Revealed (v. 34-43).

Jesus Christ on the cross is the supreme touchstone laying bare the heart of the world. Take a cross section of the world at any time since Christ was crucified and representatives of their classes were found around Jesus on the cross. The cross is the judgment of this world (John 12:31).

1. The Covetous (v. 34). They gambled for His seamless robe right under the cross where He was dying. This represents those whose primary interest in Christ is a means to get gain.

2. The Indifferent (v. 35). The people stood beholding. The great mass of the world gaze upon the crucified Christ with stolid indifference.

3. The Scoffers (v. 35-39). (1) The rulers reviled Him for His claim to being a Savior. They wanted a Savior, but not a crucified Savior. Many today are religious, but have only contempt for a salvation which centers in a blood atonement. (2) The soldiers reviled Him for claiming to be a king. The title, "King of the Jews" had been placed over him in bitter irony, but it was true, for by right of the Davidic covenant He shall be King over Israel (II Samuel 7:12-16). (3) The Impenitent Thief (v. 39). This brutal man joins in reviling the Savior even when he was under condemnation.

4. The Penitent (v. 40-43). The conscious sinner who discerned the heart of the Savior prayed for mercy. The salvation of this penitent thief is a remarkable picture of the saving power of Christ. The man confessed his sin as against God and cried to Jesus for salvation. He saw that the dying man was the forgiving God. The fact that he acknowledged his sin as against God showed that he was penitent. His request for Christ to remember him when He came into His kingdom shows that he recognized that the one who was dying on the cross was making atonement for sin and that he would come to reign as King. His salvation was immediate. Christ said, "Today shalt thou be with me in paradise."

V. The Death of Christ (v. 40-46). So shocking was the crime that nature threw around the Son of God a shroud to hide Him from the Godless crowd. Darkness was upon the land at noonday. When the price of sin was paid He cried with a loud voice showing that He still had vitality—that His death was not through exhaustion but by His sovereign will.

Time.

Time devours all human things, and it is but fitting that we should snatch something from it in our turn, which may turn to account in life eternal.—St. Vincent of Lerins.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

ONE-LEGGED ROBIN

Billie Brownie went to call upon a little robin red breast he had heard about for some time.

He had been told that this little robin only had one leg and that every summer the robin went back to the same home. So he went to the place where the robin was supposed to be and, sure enough, there he saw a one-legged robin.

"I have heard about you," said Billie Brownie to the one-legged robin after he had introduced himself and had told the robin how it was that he was able to talk so the robin could understand every single word.

"Yes, Mother Nature gave me her gracious permission to understand the language of all her different children and that is why I can understand you. Then she told me how to speak so all of you could understand me."

"And that is why you do understand me. Won't you tell me your story, Mr. Robin?"

"I'd so much like to hear it," said Mr. Robin. "And I'll also tell you a little secret."

"Someone told me that my story had been in the newspaper. Yes, it seems a little girl read about it and she asked that my story be told to more and more boys and girls for she liked hearing about me and thought others would."

"She really felt the same way about it as you do, Billie Brownie. And perhaps you can get the story around to other boys and girls; do you suppose you can do that, Billie Brownie?"

"I do believe I can," said Billie Brownie, "and it will give me great delight to do so."

Then the robin invited Billie Brownie to perch upon an apple tree in what the robin called his daytime living room.

"We'll be so cosy here," chirped the robin.

"Four years ago," he began, "I was here for the first time. I hurt myself and I didn't think I'd live. But I began to grow better and better and soon I found I was going to live."

"To be sure, I was only going to have one leg. I had lost my other in an accident, but, dear me, I have one leg left and my wings and my voice and my feathers, and I'm happy as can be!"

"Oh, the children on the farm nursed me back to health. They fed me; they cared for me. They loved me!"

"Every winter I go away to a warmer climate, but every spring I come back here and stay all through the summer."

"They all shout with delight when they see me appear."

"Spring is here, spring is here, our robin is back," they cry.

"Yes, they call me 'our robin.' Isn't that nice? And I call them my family. Often I'm saying that in my songs to them and I feel they understand."

"I take many a nice, cheery little meal with the chickens in the barnyard. Oh, I am well looked after and no mistake, And I wouldn't go to another summer home for anything—no, not this robin."

"I'm just as happy as I can be. And if you are going to tell my story I wish you'd tell the boys and girls about my song of happiness."

"Do you suppose you could do that, Billie Brownie?"

"I am sure I could, and I would be delighted to do so," Billie Brownie said.

"This is my song," the robin said. And then the robin sang, and this was his song:

I have a voice, I have a throat, and songs I love to sing. Of all the things there are on earth And of the happiness they bring.

There's sunshine and there's laughter, There's singing and there's joy. There's many a lovely girl and many a splendid boy.

They feed their friends the bird-lings. They love to see us eat!

They give us good, fresh water, So we think they're very sweet.

They fix baths for us "They Fed Me."

And put them good and high So cats cannot go for us. When they see that we are nigh. Oh, the world is full of glory.

And this is the end of my story. And Billie Brownie thanked the cheery robin for his gay little story.

Depends on Variety.

"I wonder if my little boy knows how many seconds there are in a minute."

"Do you mean a real minute, mamma, or one of those great big 'wait-a-minutes'?"

U. S. TO REFUSE ARMY PAY PLAN

Hughes Opposes Allied Offer of Occupation Costs From Reparations.

DEADLOCK IS NOW EXPECTED

Other Nations, Washington Points Out, Have Already Been Reimbursed in Part—U. S. Claims Approximate $250,000,000.

Washington, March 13.—The United States government, it is understood here, will insist upon payment for the cost of the American army of occupation pro rata from payments already made by Germany to the allies, and it will instruct Eliot Wadsworth, assistant secretary of the treasury, now in Paris, to that effect. The American claims approximate $250,000,000.

Mr. Wadsworth will be instructed to make no reply to the recent offer of the allies to the United States from future German payments, over a period of ten years. Negotiations on the subject will probably result in a deadlock unless the allies should recede from their present position. This is extremely unlikely.

The decision reached by Secretary of State Hughes, it is understood, will be transmitted promptly to Mr. Wadsworth. The United States, Mr. Hughes feels, has a moral and legal right to insist that payments for the army of occupation be made from payments Germany has already made. To accept the plan of the allies would put the United States in the position of one of the nations attempting to force collection of reparations from Germany.

The German payments have already been distributed, and there is little chance that the allies will give up what they already have. The American government has full data on the sums already collected from Germany and on the amounts, in cash and in kind, distributed to the various allied nations.

The cost of the army of occupation up to April 30, 1922, was 1,066,774,000 gold marks. Total German payments to the allies up to that date were only 778,268,000 gold marks. Thus, if the United States were paid every cent so far collected in cash from Germany, there would not be sufficient to cover the cost of the army of occupation.

Invaders Will Leave Ruhr as Germany Pays—Won't Accept Promises From Berlin.

Brussels, March 13.—Evacuation of the Ruhr will be gradual, carried out only upon Germany fulfilling her obligations, it was said in the communiqué after the first meeting of the Franco-Belgian premiers.

"The two governments are again in common accord not to accept promises from Germany. Evacuation will be carried out gradually, following the execution by Germany of her obligations," it said in part.

Nebraska Bonus Bill Passes.

Lincoln, Neb., March 13.—The state soldiers' bonus bill, providing for a fund of $10,000,000, to be raised by taxation in 1924 and 1926, if approved by referendum in 1924, passed the house by a vote of 71 to 5.

20,000 More Troops.

Brussels, March 13.—The allies will send 20,000 additional troops as a protective covering into the Ruhr to preserve order during the seizure of requisitioned coal. About 10,000 workers will also be sent in.

Grip Left You a Bad Back?

DOES your back ache day after day with a dull, unceasing throb? Are you worn out, and discouraged—ready to "give up?" Then why not look to your kidneys. Chances are a cold or a chill has weakened your kidneys? Poisons have accumulated that well kidneys would filter off. It's little wonder, then, you have constant backache, headaches, dizzy spells, annoying bladder irregularities, and sharp rheumatic twinges—that you feel nervous, "blue" and irritable. Don't wait for serious kidney trouble. Get back your health while you can. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's have helped thousands. They should help you. Ask your neighbor!

"Use Doan's," Say These Grateful Folks:

Andrew Brennan, S. Jackson St., machinist, St. Charles, Ill., says: "I caught a cold in my kidneys and it caused my back to ache. Often when I stooped over, I had to place my hands on the small of my back and straighten up slowly. I had to get up frequently at night to pass the kidney secretions, which were scanty and painful in passage. I used a box of Doan's Kidney Pills and they removed the trouble."

Mrs. Ferd Hasse, 727 Hibbard St., Staunton, Ill., says: "I had kidney complaint which came from a cold. At times I could hardly move and when I bent over and straightened up, I had a drawing pain in the small of my back. I became dizzy and specks blurred my sight. My kidneys acted too freely at night. I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and got some. Three boxes of Doan's entirely cured me of kidney trouble."

Got Some Telling Points.

A traveling man got a letter from his firm using a good deal of crisp language about expense accounts. It was passed around in the smoker and condemned roundly. After some bitter comment he slipped it into his inside pocket.

"But why do you keep that stuff?" asked a friend. "I'd tear it into a thousand bits and scatter it along the right of way."

"Well, they made some good points," he explained. "And I've gotta write to my wife tonight."

"Huh?"

"She's spending too much coin."

Red Tape at Its Highest.

Circumlocution in the civil service is not always the result of the system. A few weeks ago an official in one department made an inquiry about a certain case to a subordinate official in another section who allowed the matter to slide.

Last week the first official addressed a complaint to the subordinate's superior and the superior passed on the minute to the subordinate with the query, "Has nothing been done?"

The minute was returned marked "Yes" and was sent back to the subordinate with a laconic "What?"

"Nothing," was the subordinate's comment on the minute.

A BOOK OF DESSERT RECIPES.

In every box of Plymouth Rock Gelatine there is a little booklet of choice puddings, showing how some very nice puddings can be made without eggs or milk, or how left-over preserves or fruit juice can be made into pleasing desserts.—Advertisement.

Doubly Dazzled.

The glare from the car almost blinded the traffic cop at the crossing. He held up his hand, the car stopped, and he went over to it with stern purpose manifest in every line of his visage. There was a lady in the wheel. The conversation was prolonged. Finally, however, the officer returned to his post and the fair driver proceeded her way.

"Why didn't you make an arrest?" chaffed a passing patrolman. "The car had dazzling lamps."

"So had the girl."

Grippe

Physicians advise keeping the bowels open as a safeguard against Grippe or Influenza. When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication. Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine or laxative—so cannot gripe. Try it today.

Story of Welfare Work In Great War Told in "Service With Fighting Men"

Documented Record for American Contributors of the Millions Devoted to Soldiers' and Sailors' Welfare

By HUNT LEIGH

AN accounting to the millions of American contributors of $167,118,181.25 for welfare work in the World War by the National War Work Council of the Young Men's Christian Association has just been made.

"Service with Fighting Men," a report in two volumes of 1,300 pages, just issued, was prepared under the supervision of an editorial board of which William Howard Taft, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States is chairman.

In the foreword Chief Justice Taft refers to the work as "one of the greatest achievements of peace in all the history of human warfare." He also pays eloquent tribute to Dr. John R. Mott, General Secretary of the International Committee, Y. M. C. A., and of the National War Work Council, as one who "would seem to have been trained by Providence to do this. . . . Leaders in centers of influence the world over have a familiarity with his genius and capacity. . . . No man knew so well as he did, when we were brought into the war, the problem we would have to meet."

A Study of Principle and Philosophy

The editors present a thorough study of the principle and philosophy of all welfare work, in peace and war, not only a record but a guide. Every important statement has been based on documentary evidence and every phase of program and effort presented with frankness and without self-glorification or excuse.

A study of this history brings revelation of the magnitude and success of the American public's effort to serve not only its own soldiers and sailors but those on many other fronts and millions of prisoners of war. Because it was the largest of the welfare organizations, the service with the American Army, it follows the Allied forces to Egypt and Mesopotamia to Russia and Italy and East Africa; it gathers its course the groups of American welfare men who served with the French Army, who shared in the Si-berian Odyssey of the Czechoslovaks, and who entered Jerusalem with Allenby's troops. It touches on the construction of Poland and the fundamental welfare problems American Association men are still helping to work out in Roumania and Greece and throughout southeastern Europe. It is, in short, a world story of American idealism in action. Since more than 26,000 workers, men and women, were in this service at home and abroad, few communities of the country are without those who had a direct part in the work. Out of the more than 12,000 who served overseas, only 750 were regular peace-time Association secretaries. The volumes constitute an accounting on their part and of their leaders of this greatest of all welfare undertakings, conducted on the basis of the sacrificial contributions of the American public as a whole. Their work was performed, as Marshall Foch describes it, "beneath the shadow of the finest of ideals, the great principle of humanity—unselfish service." Many of them laid down their lives for this principle. Among them was William Sloane, president of the National War Work Council, to whose memory this history is dedicated. "Service with Fighting Men" seeks to present a full and honest account of the experience of the immediate past. Because of its candor and completeness, it should also serve as a guide for present and future.
